Appendix B. Vaccination precautions

As recommended by the World Health Organization, the 2014/15 seasonal influenza vaccine contains human swine influenza virus (A/California/7/2009 (H1N1)pdm09-like virus). According to a recent large collaborative multinational study by the World Health Organization, it was concluded that an association between the human swine influenza vaccines and GBS was observed¹. There could be 1 to 2 excess cases of GBS among every one million recipients of the vaccine. Nevertheless, the author supplemented that given the rarity of the event, their findings support international recommendations for the continued use of influenza vaccines. In addition, recent extensive review which evaluated the risk of GBS after administration of influenza vaccines (excluding the 1976-1977 swine influenza vaccine) concluded that the evidence is inadequate to accept or reject a causal relationship between influenza vaccine and GBS².

Inactivated seasonal influenza vaccine

People who are allergic to a previous dose of inactivated seasonal influenza vaccine or other vaccine components (please refer to the insert of the vaccine) are not suitable to have the inactivated seasonal influenza vaccination. Individuals with mild egg allergy who are considering an influenza vaccination can be given inactivated seasonal influenza vaccine in primary care. Individuals with diagnosed or suspected severe egg allergy should be seen by an allergist/immunologist for evaluation of egg allergy and for administration of inactivated seasonal influenza vaccine if clinically indicated. Those with bleeding disorders or on warfarin may receive the vaccine by deep subcutaneous injection. If an individual suffers from fever on the day of vaccination, the vaccination should be deferred till recovery.

² IOM (Institute of Medicine). Adverse effects of vaccines: Evidence and causality. Washington, DC: The National Academies Press (2012).

Seasonal influenza vaccination may be rarely followed by serious adverse events such as Guillain-Barré syndrome (GBS) (1 to 2 case per 1 million vaccinees), meningitis or encephalopathy (1 in 3 million doses distributed), and anaphylaxis (9 in 10 million doses distributed).

GBS is a polyneuritis which may follow about two weeks after viral infection, surgery or rarely after immunisation. It is characterised by progressive weakness of all limbs and areflexia. So far, no clear association has been found between GBS with seasonal influenza vaccine.
